

Family Worship Contest for Rookies

My definition of a rookie is a family that has not yet been able to consistently meet together one day each week for reading scripture. You may have tried before, but not been able to make this edifying activity a habit in your home. If you are currently meeting at least one day per week, you are a veteran and not a rookie.

For purposes of the contest, I am defining family worship as meeting together as a family, and reading some portion of the Bible accompanied by prayer, as a minimum. If you want to add testimony time or hymn singing, please do! This sacred time is therefore a little different than a fun family night, or reading a good book aloud, both of which are admirable and valuable in their own right.

Our spring contest will begin on April 1, continue for 40 days, and conclude on May 10, which is Mother's Day.

The awards will be gift certificates for MathUSee, SpellingYouSee, and Building Faith Families resources. All families that participate will win something. But the more days you meet, the better your prize!

When you have finished the contest, send me an email(spdemme@gmail.com) with how many days your family met. I will compile the results and you will be notified about your prize.

Bless you each in meeting together!
